

OVERVIEW

To address the needs of SOTA and other conference presenters, we are offering state-of-the-art interactive knowledge-sharing techniques designed for the experts that present information to others. Presentation skills development and coaching take into account the need for more attention to field-specific conditions and more time to problem-solve with colleagues. These coaching and seminar offerings are designed to support your presentation skills by expanding the range of available interactive techniques.

Presenting for Results

OBJECTIVES

At the end of the overview and individual coaching session(s) you will:

- Develop a script that uses current training and audience management techniques
- Determine your knowledge transfer objectives
- Connect more effectively with the participants and meet their needs

WHO SHOULD ATTEND?

Most presentation skills programs are geared toward being interesting and entertaining. This seminar focuses on structure and the nature of the interaction between presenter and audience. This approach was specifically developed for the effective transfer of technical information that is the goal of USAID state-of-the-art conferences. Recommended for HPN staff, AFR and EE SOTA presenters in Washington or virtually. Evaluations of presenters who attended and used these skills were remarkably better than those who did not.

TWO OFFERINGS

An overview entitled “Presenting for Results” that covers the basic principles, and individual coaching sessions with Gail Rae to help you become an engaging and interactive facilitator.
